❖ FOREWORD FROM THE DEAN

Among the many important events hosted by the Faculty of Medicine at the Chinese University of Hong Kong, the annual Teachers' and Students' Prizes and Awards Presentation Ceremony deserves special recognition. This is the one occasion when we come together to thank our dedicated teachers who have not only passed on their knowledge to our students, but have also inspired them. They sacrifice their time to nurture our next generation, placing education as their top priority. In honouring them, we are paying tribute to all of the teachers who have contributed to the success of this faculty.

This joyful event also presents an opportunity to celebrate the academic accomplishments of our bright students. Only the best students are selected to study in the Faculty of Medicine, so if you have joined our ranks it is because you have proven yourself to be the crème de la crème. My heartfelt congratulations also go to your parents, who must be very proud of you. I want to remind you that this is only the beginning. Success is the enemy of greater success, and I hope you will continue to strive and excel in your future careers.

Finally, I would like to take this opportunity to express my gratitude to our benefactors and donors. Your generosity is a great encouragement to our students and your unfailing support will continue to drive our pursuit for excellence.

SHARING BY MASTER TEACHERS ❖

*Professor LEE Wing Yan Vivian
School of Pharmacy*

I am greatly honoured to be awarded the Master Teacher Award this year. At the Chinese University of Hong Kong, we nurture our next generation to be the future leaders of our society, and young people learn and grow both academically, and morally. The importance of university education in the development of students destined to be the future citizens of Hong Kong cannot be underestimated. This is their time to learn how to be independent and reliable individuals. As a university educator for over 12 years, I believe that we play a pivotal role in teaching young people, and our lessons are not limited to the classroom. I believe learning is a lifelong process that happens anywhere and anytime. I was hired as an instructor at the School of Pharmacy in 2000. I still remember my first lecture, delivered with sweaty palms, because I had no experience in formal classroom teaching. That lecture was very dry and dull with little interaction between myself and my students. I faced the same issues that challenge all teachers – how to make teaching more creative and stimulating for our students. If you had asked me 12 years ago, I would never have imagined that I would be the recipient of the Teacher of the Year and Master Teacher awards from the Faculty of Medicine, along with the Vice Chancellor’s Exemplary Teaching award in 2010.

I have been fortunate to discover ways to engage my students, and I believe that teaching, research and service development can co-exist harmoniously. My teaching philosophy is “TEACH” – Teamwork, Engage, Action, Commitment and Heart. Teaching is our promise and commitment to students, and it comes from the bottom of our hearts, reflected in our various actions, engagements and teamwork. Teaching and learning should be a win-win relationship, and my students and I now work as a team – a skill I learned in my elderly outreach programmes. Likewise, we have discovered and generated new tools to facilitate medication safety. This consolidated approach has identified the demand for drug information in those outreach programmes, and thus we launched the first interactive online drug enquiry platform – Ask My Pharmacist Online University Led drug Enquiry platform (AMPOULE) (www.ampoule.org.hk) in February 2009. This project was supported by the UGC knowledge transfer project fund (KTPF) in 2010, and my students and I are currently working on new outreach projects supported by the KTPF 2012, CARxE and the e-teaching platform iPHARM. In the upcoming triennium, I plan to collaborate with medicine and nursing colleagues in a new e-learning platform on medication safety “MELODY”, which is supported by a Teaching Development Grant.

I am grateful for the opportunities I have received from the School of Pharmacy and the Faculty of Medicine. I would also like to express my gratitude to all of my students, who believe in my teaching philosophy. Finally, I give thanks to my family for providing unconditional love and support: you have been a blessing to me, so that I may be a blessing to others.
