

Contents

INTRODUCTION

From Textuality to Historicity: Issues and Concepts / ix

CHAPTER I

Four Figures (Phases) of the I: A History of Subjective Writing / 1

Figure I: The I as Inquisitor of Its Own Soul and Victim/
Accomplice of History / 1

Figure II: The I as the Other: Dissonance of the Subject Who Refuses to Be an Accomplice of History / 6

Figure III: The I Internalised to the Very Depths of the Even Stranger Self / 7

Figure IV: I and He: Dual Time—The Present and Memory / 9

CHAPTER II

An Underground Voice: Zhang Zhongxiao—Wumenglou Suibi
無夢樓隨筆 (Essays from the Dreamless Pavilion) / 13

Zhang Zhongxiao, a Voice in Utter Solitude / 19

Subjective Writing from Out of the Solitary Voice / 22

CHAPTER III

Memory of the I: Disengagement, Assertion, and Interrogation of the Subject—Mu Dan / 35

Youth (1934–1937): Grave and Pensive Dawn-Light / 36

First English Influence: Youthful Prose / 38

The “Modernist” Phase (1938–1941) / 43

Mythical Evocation and the End of Chronology / 52

Transformation: From Modernism to Realism:
The I Craving Realism (1949–1957) / 68

Time of “Silence” (1958–1974): Writing Abandoned / 80

Last Years (1975–1977): Metamorphosis of the I and Mythical or Divine Temptation / 82

CHAPTER IV

Historicity and Internal Memory:

The Today School and the Stars Group / 97

From the Chorus of the We to the Solo Performance / 98

The I Looking Out: The Today School / 104

Metamorphosis: The I and Its Shadow / 119

Historical, Internal, and Intermediate Time / 122

Breaking to Create: A Twin for Today—The Stars Group of Artists / 141

CHAPTER V

A Breakthrough for Modernity:

Fragmentary Women’s Writing—Xiao Hong and Zhang Ailing / 153

Periods / 154

The Committed I: First Signs of Feminism / 162

High Tension Writing: The Triad of History/Narrative/
Narration—Acceleration/Deceleration / 164

CHAPTER VI

Fragmentary Women's Writing: Lin Bai and Can Xue / 175

Writing in Parentheses: Lin Bai / 175

Interrogatory Writing: Can Xue / 192

CHAPTER VII

Death: Hai Zi's City of the Sun / 201

Death: Immanentisation of the Spirit / 202

The I as Memory Stone without Memory / 209The I Identifying with the Sun / 223

CHAPTER VIII

A Commitment Both Existential and Linguistic: Zhai Yongming / 231

Illusion and Chance in Autonomous Monologue / 232

Night: An Inner Light between Before-Sense, After-Sense, and Nonsense / 235

Midnight: The Altered Instant of Disappearing/Appearing / 245

CHAPTER IX

Writing: A Dreamed Elsewhere—Literary China's Imaginary West / 253

The West: Terminology and Three Introductory Paths / 254

Figures of the West: The Religious and a Dreamed Elsewhere / 255

CHAPTER X

Bei Dao: The Infinitely Other I in Search of Pure Poetry / 265

Early Steps towards a Pure Poetry / 265

The Wandering I: Internal Escape / 269

The Infinitely Othered I / 274

Ambiguity of the I / 292

Towards a Polysemy of the Word Opposed to the Univocality of the Subjective / 295

The Musicality of Poetry at Four Levels of Fracture: Can Impossibility Be Rendered Possible in Writing? / 334

CONCLUSION

The Other: Identity or Identification? The Evolution of Contemporary Chinese Literature—From the Text to the Reader / 343

Subjective Writing: Concept and Issues / 343

Challenges and Approaches / 345

Outcome and Research Prospects / 348

Writing Called Into Question: The Problem of Language / 348

Women's Writing / 350

New Research Approach: Utopian or Dystopian Writing / 352

Notes / 357

Bibliography / 389