WHEN SOCIAL SCIENCE MEETS COMPUTER SCIENCE...

The Chinese University of Hong Kong
Computational Social Science PhD Fellowship*

Faculty Strategic Initiative

This fellowship is an integral part of the interdisciplinary CSS initiative of the Faculty of Social Science, supported by its CSS Lab and the popular CSS Webinar Series that has attracted thousands of participants in recent live-streamed talks.

Funding Level and Period

Each fellowship award pays a monthly stipend equal to the amount of a regular PhD studentship at CUHK, lasting for four years of full time study even if an awardee has a research master degree.

Affiliated Degree Programs

The PhD degree granted to a CSS Fellow will depend on the departmental affiliation of the supervisor(s) of a student within the Faculty of Social Science.

CSS Fellows may affiliate with any participating academic unit within the Faculty of Social Science, including Architecture, Geography and Resource Management, Journalism and Communication, Social Work, and Sociology.

Dual Academic Identity

Every CSS Fellow will have two institutional homes — the CSS Lab and the hosting department.

This is a strategic feature of the PFS to ensure that all CSS Fellows will acquire a dual scholarly identity — an expert in CSS and a disciplinary expert — so that they will be optimally positioned for the job market.
