The aim of our Department is not to nurture professional athletes, but it emphasizes the application of different exercise science principles and knowledge to the teaching profession. However, applicants' interests and experience in physical activities are also very important. Thus, our Department will consider an applicant's academic results as well as his/her interest and participation in sports when assessing whether he/she is suitable for our Programme.

Applicants need to attend both an interview and skills proficiency test.

Our Department has not set the ratio of male : female students admitted to our Programme. In determining the admission of students, we will comprehensively consider their academic results, past sports participation and experience, interview performance and skills proficiency test results.

Q6 What are the career prospects after graduation?

Most of our graduates become physical education teachers in primary and secondary schools or higher education institutions. Some of them serve as administrators in national sports associations or executives in fitness and leisure industries. In addition, some graduates continue to pursue their master and doctoral degrees, related to physical education, exercise science and health, in both local and overseas universities.

Q7 Do candidates need to have passion for sports?

Yes. It is because the courses in our Programme require students to learn the skills of different sports. Without having passion for sports, students will find our courses difficult.

Q8 What are the differences between CUHK's Physical Education and Sports Science Programme and some similar programmes offered by other universities?

Our Programme aims to train students to become excellent Physical Education teachers. Our courses emphasize the application of exercise science principles to teaching and administration. The content includes sports skills, theories and professional knowledge, such as exercise physiology, exercise psychology, sports pedagogy and sports management. Upon the completion of our Programme, students will be awarded a Bachelor of Education degree, which also leads to an award equivalent to Postgraduate Diploma in Education.

Q9 Is it a must to have at least one sports specialty?

It is not necessary to possess one sports specialty. But if you want to develop your career in the field of physical education, exercise science and health, we expect you to be adventurous and willing to learn, so that you will continuously learn new sports skills.
