

Some Remarks

- This morning I could not turn on my PC. During days of epidemic there were little staff support. It took some time to return to normal. I am really sorry about it. Sadly, I am afraid that this kind of interruption may happen now and then in the rest of this semester.
- Now the xerox machine is down. I cannot scan my handwritten lecture notes. You could look at my notes in class. I will try to upload it next week.
- The outcome of the midterm is fine to me, although I expected the average to be around 60. In my opinion, the materials after midterm are somewhat easier than multiple integrals. Working harder, you can score much better in the final examination. So no need to worry too much if you did poorly in the midterm.
- Writing on the exam papers not convenient in Gradescope, I gave marks after reading the papers but did not highlight the mistakes, nor making remarks. Thus it does not make much sense to look at the paper. If your expected scores differ much with the actual ones, let me know and I will look at the paper once more. The papers were marked by me and checked subsequently by the TA. I believe the chance of errors is slim.
