Hui Yeung Shing Building Formally Opened

The Hui Yeung Shing Building was formally opened by Sir Yuet-keung Kan, pro-chancellor of the University, on 21st May.

The new 10-storey building with a total floor area of 5,350 square meters represents the first phase of the redevelopment of teaching blocks at Chung Chi College. It accommodates offices, classrooms, laboratories and rehearsal rooms for the departments of music, Japanese studies, and religion, as well as The Chinese University Press.

The building has been named after the late Mr. Hui Yeung Shing, a trustee of New Asia College from the early 1950s until his death in 1981, in recognition of the staunch support he gave to the University for various academic development programmes.

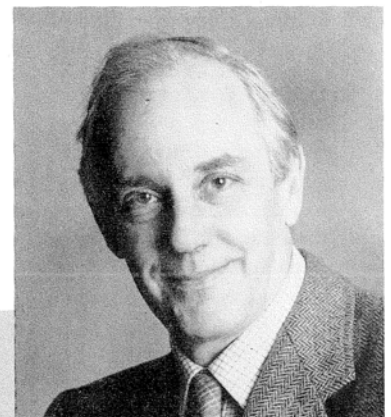

Wei Lun Visiting Professor Talks about Imperfections

Prof. Peter Townsend, professor of experimental physics from the University of Sussex, gave a lecture on 'The Need for Imperfections' on 14th May at Lecture Theatre I of the Lady Shaw Building.

'Crystals are like people,' he said, 'it is their imperfections which make them interesting.' In his lecture, Prof. Townsend explained how perfect materials do not, and cannot exist. He pointed out some common features of imperfections in different materials and explained how imperfections could be controlled and engineered to advantage. Common examples of defect-controlled processes and devices included, he said, semiconductors, the photographic process, TV phosphors, hardness, solid state lasers, and optical fibres.

Prof. Townsend's visit to the University was sponsored by the Wei Lun Visiting Professorship/Fellowship Programme. In addition to giving a public lecture on imperfections, he conducted two seminars during his stay, one on optical effects of ion implantation, and the other on thermoluminescence spectra in physics and geology.

More Funds for Research on China's Economic Development

Three Taiwanese entrepreneurs in Hong Kong recently donated HK$500,000 to the University to support research into the economic reform and development of China.

The donation from Messrs. Wong Mau Hung, Hong Wing Cheung and Lam Yiu Ming will be used to set up a permanent fund to finance the activities of the China's Reform and Development Research Programme of the Hong Kong Institute of Asia-Pacific Studies (HKIAPS). One such activity is a conference on China's regional economic development to be held in May 1993.

The HKIAPS has been studying the process, content, and results of China's political, economic and social reforms, trying to analyse different reform proposals and strategies and to establish a set of development models for China.

Current research projects which involve scholars from China include studies on the productivity, efficiency and reform of China's economy, China's regional economic development, and the economic reforms and open-door policy in Guangdong.

Intersarsity Debating Contest

CUHK vs. University of Macau

The University's Cantonese debating team captured the champion trophy in the 1992 intersarsity debating contest held between The Chinese University and the University of Macau on 30th May at New Town Plaza, Sha Tin. Mr. Yip Kam Leung on the CUHK team was also selected best speaker in the contest.

Speaking for the motion 'Beauty contests should be abolished', the CUHK team won by a margin of two to one after an hour of heated debate.

The contest is an annual event organized by the two universities to promote cultural exchange and to stimulate student interest in debating activities.

Four More Long Service Awardees Recount Their Experience

In the May and June issues we reported on the University's Long Service Award Presentation Ceremony 1991-92 and profiled 16 recipients of the award. In this issue we will profile four more staff members honoured for 25 years' service to the University.

Dr. Yung Kung-hing

Senior Lecturer, Biology Department

When I was only a student, I already yearned for a teaching career in a university. I was most attracted by the aura of intellectual freedom on the campus, and the refreshing and stimulating interaction between teachers and students.

I chose to teach in The Chinese University because of my strong attachment to this place. Myself a graduate of Chung Chi College, I witnessed the establishment of the Department of Biology in 1958 and was the first student assistant employed by the department to help with general clerical work and the preparation of equipment for laboratory classes. My interest in biology grew with greater exposure to the subject during that period, and upon graduation, I continued to serve there as graduate assistant for three more years before I went to the States to pursue further studies in biochemistry and plant physiology. After a year of post-doctoral research, I returned to teach in the CUHK.

Not until I received this award did I realize what a long time it has been since I first enrolled as an undergraduate in Chung Chi – 37 years! Over the years, the greatest change I have observed is in the nature of teacher-student relationship on the campus. In the old days, students mixed freely with their teachers, and the subject of their discussion might range from academic studies to current affairs, human relationships, and philosophical issues. Today, the role of the teacher seems to have been confined to the dissemination of knowledge. I feel sad about this increasing lack of communication between teachers and students, which has at times resulted in unnecessary misunderstanding and friction.

Looking back, I am on the whole happy with my life as a teacher here. There are too many unforgettable events to recount one by one, but I would say that what has given me the greatest satisfaction is to see that my students grow 'in stature and wisdom' after graduation and become useful members of society.

Mr. Woo Ting-kwok

Technician, Biology Department

I think I am the kind of man who wants to devote his whole life to one occupation. The idea of changing jobs has never really appealed to me. Maybe it is because I am interested in my present job, which involves both indoor and outdoor work. My duties in the Department of Biology include managing the greenhouse – from monitoring plant growth to watering and applying insecticides and fertilizers. I am also responsible for preparing animal and plant specimens for laboratory use.

To collect specimens, I have to go on field trips two to three times a week during term time, each time to different sites. I dare say I have left my footprints on nearly every local hillock. Sometimes a trip may span overnight. Running into bad weather or losing my way were not uncommon, not to mention being bitten by unknown bugs. I count myself lucky that there haven't been any serious accidents so far.

Such frequent excursions have given me a suntan which, I am afraid, makes me look rather like an African. After spending so many years in the 'wilderness', I find that even the mosquitoes have lost interest in me.

Since outdoor work is already quite exhausting, I seldom engage in strenuous sports activities during my spare time. I do, however, swim occasionally, and playing mah-jong is one of my favourite pastimes.

Mr. Shu Shi-wing

Works Supervisor II, Technical Services Unit

I used to be in the house decoration business but I didn't find the working environment to my liking. It so happened that my mother was working at a University professor's house, and learnt of a job opening in the Chemistry Department of United College. I managed to get the job, which consisted basically in preparing laboratory equipment for students. Later my supervisors learnt of my carpentry skills, and assigned some woodwork duties to me as well. I guess they found my work quite satisfactory, for very soon I was put in charge of making wooden furniture for the college.

In 1984, I was transferred to the carpentry team of the newly established Technical Services Unit, specifically responsible for making cupboards, tables and shelves for different departments in the Science Centre.

There is really nothing to boast about my craftsmanship, although from time to time some colleagues will ask me to make a few pieces for them, and although I make most of the furniture in my own house. The things I make are usually practical and plain, with no frills, and no fanciful design.

I am fully contented with my life and work here. Everything is just fine and I intend to stay in my job for as long as I can.

Mr. Chan Kam-chuen

General Clerk, Business Section, University Bursary

Before I settled down in the University 25 years ago, I had worked in a garment factory, a dye-works, and also the YMCA.

In the beginning I worked in the Chung Chi College Bursary and was responsible for general accounting work, the preparation of photos for staff identity cards, and other clerical duties. When University administration became centralized, I was reassigned to the Business Section of the University Bursary. My duties here include purchasing, stock-keeping, coordinating the supply of stationery to all units, and the loaning of academic dresses.

Departmental demand for stationery has increased tremendously over the years with the University's gradual expansion, and my workload has become heavier and heavier. The busiest month is usually June when we need to prepare year-end financial statements. Luckily, I've had very understanding supervisors. My former supervisor, Mr. K. C. Young, assigned a colleague to share my workload and secured computer facilities to help streamline procedures. I take pride in being the first one in the Business Section to use computers. My present supervisor, Mr. Patrick Yiu, has not only taught me how to increase efficiency in handling paper work, but has also encouraged me to undertake further studies to improve my job skills. Last year I enrolled in a two-year course in stores supervision at the Shatin Technical Institute.

I am an amateur in weightlifting, and was once the weightlifting champion in Chung Chi College's staff-student athletic meet in the sixties. I was also a member of the Royal Hong Kong Auxiliary Police Force for over 10 years, during which period I picked up shooting as a hobby. Every now and then I will make special trips to Shenzhen to practise the sport.

Staff Team Captures Shell Cup

For the third year in succession the staff team beat the student players at tennis and captured the Shell Cup.

The Shell Cup Staff-Student Tennis Match is an annual event and this year the match took place on 14th May at the University Sports Centre. The staff had an overwhelming victory and defeated the students 7:2 in the nine-game match.

After the match, the champion trophy was presented to the staff players by Prof. Rance P. L. Lee, chairman of the Senate Committee on Physical Education.

Players on the staff team included Dr. K. K. Mark (Biology), Dr. Leung Yee (Geography), Dr. Spencer Wong (Extramural Studies), Dr. Michael Tam (Physiology), Dr. Augustine Cheng (Microbiology), Mr. Tam Yuk Ho (Clinical Research) and Mr. Lau Wing Chung (Physical Education).

How You Can Help Reduce Wastage

Environmental protection has been a hot topic in the mass media these years. Time and again we've been called upon to save our natural world, which is running down tragically, and unnecessarily.

The message is everywhere, but to many it is only a cause worthy of moral support. How should we go one step further to translate moral support into action? The Buildings Office has provided some tips on how we can help in our place of work. The theme is the reduction of wastage and the course of action suggested is as follows:

Save Water

- ☆ Turn off running taps and report to the Buildings Office immediately when you discover leaking taps and cisterns.
- ☆ Do not flush toilets unnecessarily.

Save Electricity

- ☆ Turn off all lights and air-conditioners in vacant rooms.
- ☆ Keep all doors closed in an air-conditioned area.
- ☆ Use natural light as far as possible, especially when your desk is near a window.

- ☆ Use the staircases more frequently and the lifts less frequently.

The Buildings Office has also taken steps to reduce overall electricity consumption on the campus. The temperature of air-conditioned rooms will be set at 25°C as the lowest during the summer, and all central refrigeration plants will be closed as soon as the offices close. To remind the University community of the need to conserve energy, it will also provide periodically statistics on electricity consumption in different buildings on the campus.

Currently, the buildings with the highest average monthly consumption are, in descending order, the Science Centre, the Basic Medical Sciences Building, Pi Ch'iu Building, University Administration Building, and the East Block of the Science Centre.

Building	Average Monthly Consumption (kwhr)
	1991	Jan. to Apr. 1992
Science Ctr.	405,434	274,868
Basic Medical Sci. Bldg.	379,000	367,751
Pi Ch'iu Bldg.	204,018	170,048
Admin. Bldg.	177,533	96,277
East Block of the Sci. Ctr.	157,767	61,432
Entire University	3,229,975	2,561,484

Recreational & Sports Facilities on Campus

The University and its constituent colleges offer a wide range of sports and recreational facilities on campus for both its students and staff members. To encourage members of the University to make more use of such facilities in the summer, CUHK Newsletter has listed relevant details on pages 7 and 8 for ease of reference.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Scholarships at the Harvard-Yenching Institute

Applications are now invited from faculty members in the humanities and social sciences for two Harvard-Yenching scholarships for the academic year 1993-94.

(1) Visiting Scholars Programme

This programme offers one-year fellowships to regular faculty members to study and conduct research at Harvard University. Applied fields of studies such as business management, library science and the more practical aspects of law, etc. will not be subsidized. The study or research should not lead to the award of a degree.

Applicants must be aged 42 or under on 1st September 1992, have been teaching for four consecutive years prior to the award of the scholarship, and speak fluent English.

The award covers round-trip airfare for the successful applicant, a stipend of US$1,650 per month for up to 11 months, fees for health insurance, and the use of the Harvard Clinic.

(2) Doctoral Scholarship Programme

The programme supports junior faculty members to pursue Ph.D. studies. Practical fields of studies such as business management, library science, mass communication, teaching English as a foreign language and social work, etc. are excluded from this programme.

Applicants must be regular faculty members who will return to teach at The Chinese University upon completion of their studies. They are required to sit for the TOEFL test before October 1992 and to take the Graduate Record Examinations. They also need to have gained admission to Harvard University or other major universities for Ph.D. studies before they can qualify for the scholarship.

The scholarship is tenable for one academic year (usually from September to June) and the recipient may apply for renewal thereafter. It covers transportation to and from the University attended, tuition, health fees, and a living stipend (to be determined with reference to the local cost of living and other sources of support).

Applications endorsed by the department/unit head and the faculty dean should be forwarded to Mr. Raymond Leung, Assistant Secretary (Personnel) on or before 24th July 1992 for presentation to the relevant committees for consideration. After the University has submitted its nominations to the Harvard-Yenching Institute, shortlisted applicants will be interviewed by a representative of the institute in Hong Kong around October or November 1992. For further details, please contact the Personnel Section (Ext.7183 or 7265).

Certificate Courses in Theology

The Theology Division and the Department of Extramural Studies will jointly offer one-year elementary and intermediate certificate courses in theology this October.

Elementary Course

Course contents will include introduction to theology, introduction to the Old and New Testaments, church history, Christian education, and pastoral care.

Intermediate Course

Course contents will include theology in social context, synoptic Gospels, Old Testament theology in Hong Kong context, Chinese church history, Christian ethics, and counselling and growth.

Those who are interested should apply before 8th August. For further information, please contact the Theology Division (Ext. 6705) or the Department of Extramural Studies.

Application for Research Grants

Applications for the following research grants are now invited:

1. Earmarked grants from the UPGC Research Grants Council 1993-94
2. Research grants from the Croucher Foundation (October 1992 exercise)
3. Research grants from the Epsom Foundation (October 1992 exercise)

Applications should be made on prescribed forms and conform to a stipulated format. Completed applications should be sent to the Research Administration Office at Room 306, John Fulton Centre by 4th September 1992 (internal deadline). Application forms and format guidelines can be obtained from the Research Administration Office (Ext. 7865). For general enquiries, please call Ext. 7866.

Dinner Party to Celebrate the 70th Birthday of Prof. Chen Ning Yang

The Organizing Committee for Prof. Chen Ning Yang's 70th Birthday Celebration will hold a birthday dinner party in honour of Prof. Yang, Distinguished Professor-at-Large of the University, on 5th August at 7.00 p.m. in the Jade Ballroom of the Hotel Furama Kempinski Hong Kong.

On the same occasion, contributions will be invited for the establishment of the C. N. Yang Visiting Professorship Fund. Money raised will be used to invite world-renowned physicists to visit the University and to give lectures and conduct research at the Physics Department.

Those interested in joining the party or contributing to the C. N. Yang Visiting Professorship Fund please contact the Department of Physics at 6096125 or 6096339. Tickets for the dinner will be sold at $450 each.

Non-fee-charging Bus Service for Staff

The University will provide a non-fee-charging bus service during the months of June, July and August (except on Sundays and public holidays) to facilitate those staff members who travel to and from work by train. To tie in with University working hours, the bus will run on the following schedule from 1st June to 28th August:
