

Contents

Acknowledgments	xi
1. Introduction	1
2. China's Confrontation with the West and Processes of Modernization: From the Liberalization of the Subject to a Free Market
2.1 The Confucian Revival and the Multiple Images of Modernity	9
2.2 Modernity with Chinese Characteristics	14
2.3 Daring Reforms, Ambitious Innovations and Passionately Naïve Movements	18
2.4 Gradual Westernization: The Case of Taiwan	24
3. Modern Confucianism
3.1 The "Three Generations"	29
3.2 The Rehabilitation of Tradition and the Challenges of Modernization	32
3.3 Theoretical and Conceptual Platforms	39

viii	Contents
3.4	Critique	44
3.5	The Problem of “Asian Values”	49
4.	The “Second Generation”
4.1	The Teachers: A Short Introduction of the First Generation	59
4.2	The New Moral Metaphysics: Mou Zongsan	65
4.3	Fang Dongmei and the Philosophy of Creative Creativity	74
4.4	Xu Fuguan: A Philosopher of Culture, Philology and Politics	82
4.5	The Voice from Hong Kong: Tang Junyi	92
5.	Science and Democracy
5.1	The Old Holism in a New Disguise	101
5.2	People as the Foundation of the State and Man as a Basis of Science	103
5.3	The Heavenly Mandate and the Analysis of the Basis of Integration	110
5.4	Two Truths, Two Subjects	116
6.	The Midwives of Modern Cultures: Reason, Subjectivity and their Philosophical Connotations
6.1	Some Fundamental Distinctions: The Problem of Immanent Transcendence	131
6.2	Transcendental Subject and Empirical Self: The Problem of the Individual and their Subjectivity	137
6.3	From the Self-Negation of the Subject to the Modern Form of the Confucian Moral Self	150
6.4	Reason and Intuition	162
6.5	The Unemployed God	178

7. The Modern Confucian Legacy and the New Confucian Ideologies in the People's Republic of China: The Case of Harmony
7.1 Confucianism in the People's Republic of China— A Brief Historical Overview	194
7.2 A Harmony of Peace and Order	196
7.3 Classical Harmony	198
7.4 Modern Confucian Harmony as Balance and Equilibrium	202
8. Conclusion—Modern Confucianism Between Past and Future	211
Appendix 1: A Chronology of China's History of Dynasties and Republics	219
Appendix 2: A Chronology of the Developmental Phases of Confucianism	223
Notes	225
Bibliography	259
Index	287