

CONTENTS

Acknowledgments	vii
List of Illustrations	ix
Introduction	xiii
1 A New Art Ecosystem and Its Burgeoning Effects	1
Resistance to the Culture of Mainland China	2
The Civil Referendum and the White Paper on “One Country, Two Systems”	6
The Industrial Buildings Revitalization Scheme: Consequences of the Global Financial Crisis and the Threat of Homelessness	19
The Art Ecosystem of Hong Kong: A Sketch	26
Art and Its Public in an Evolving Ecosystem	64
Conclusion: Questioning the Idea of Cultural Purity	80
2 Sorting the Intricacies of a Complex Art Field	97
The Taste for Images Made by Hand as Habitus in Mainland China	98
Piaget Group: A Relational Model to Define Present Art Practices in Hong Kong	119
Conclusion: Another Relational Model and a Blind Spot	141

3	“Native” Chinese Art	155
	Is Literati Art Still Alive?	156
	Local Literati: The “Conservative Nativist” and Other Strategies in Hong Kong	178
	An Example of a Strategy of Distinction in the Work of a Hong Kong Plastician	188
	Conclusion: Against a “Pure” Critique of Art	198
4	Ink Art	209
	Contemporary and Traditional	210
	Superflatness in Hong Kong?	231
	Conclusion: How the Polarized Ideas of Traditional/Contemporary Often Define Positions in the Art Field	239
5	Plastician Practices	245
	Painting as Part of Multiple Strategies	246
	Private Experiences Beyond the Made-by-the-Hand Habitus	258
	Colonial and Postcolonial Politics	275
	Conclusion: The Rhizome within a National/Infranational Cultural Frame	293
6	Relational Aesthetics in the Expanded Field	301
	The Urban Civic Movement	302
	Tactics and Strategies	311
	The Writing on the Walls	352
	Conclusion: Toward More Dialogical Practices	363
	Coda	373
	Bibliography	379