About The Chinese University of Hong Kong Institute of Health Equity

The CUHK Institute of Health Equity was established in 2020 with the vision of being a leading institution in promoting health equity studies in Asia. It aims to promote research in health equity in Hong Kong and Asia, investigate if disparities exist in different communities, and analyse them and the contributing societal factors. In collaboration with the University College London (UCL) Institute of Health Equity, the CUHK Institute of Health Equity examines issues of health equity in Hong Kong so as to inform government policies and intervention programmes, and improve the health equity of Hong Kong. Professor Sir Michael Marmot from UCL, Professor E.K. Yeoh and Professor Jean Woo from CUHK are Co-Directors of the Institute. Ongoing research projects aim to examine the COVID-19 health inequity situation in Hong Kong, and factors contributing to the long life expectancy and health disparities in Hong Kong.
