She has also hosted three charitable International Conferences on Art Therapy in 2013-2019, to continue to promote cultural exchange in the field of art therapy with an international perspective.

Brief Rationale Behind

NDI® combines the use of drawings and the narratives that clients give about the drawings, as well as the therapeutic conversations between the client and therapist, in order to bring unconscious feels and thoughts into conscious expressions. Once the unconscious becomes conscious, in one's life, more choice will become possible. Hence, the problem-saturated story can be deconstructed and the preferred story can be reconstructed.

The first step of a typical NDI® session involves goal setting, establishing of therapeutic relationships and engaging in therapeutic conversations. Through narratives of the story behind client's drawings, intrinsic meaning of 'subconscious symbols' can be externalized to a conscious level, which grants helping professionals the opportunity to observe and understand the inner self of clients. When clients are able to understand themselves, they can start to accept themselves and to finally play out their potentials to fullest. As such, we aim to draw out inner strengths and core values of clients, explore their external resources and support systems and ultimately to increase self-acceptance and resilience, in order to replace unconscious defense mechanism with positive conscious coping strategies, where self-confidence and hopes of the clients can be harvested.
