1. Outward Bound Camp 外展訓練營

11 College students challenged themselves to a journey of self-discovery at the Outward Bound Camp held from 30th Mar to 2nd Apr. The 4-day camp started off with sea jumping, an activity accompanied by, in the exact order, struggle, scream, excitement and sense of achievement. It served as a perfect preview of the entire programme: discover your potentials while immersing in the beauty of wilderness.

With their mobile phones taken away and only given basic survival tools, participants had nothing to rely on but themselves and each other. Physical tasks including land expedition, wood-cutting and cordage-weaving proved them to be more persistent and determined than they thought, and crisis management experiences from unexpected incidents left them with a positive attitude to deal with adversities in life.

The camp was planned to conclude with a sunrise challenge which participants, after a long night walk, failed to see due to weather conditions. But at the end, it was the team support in the dark that matters, and who says the captivating night view along the way was not better than the sunrise?
