

About the Nature Positive Universities Alliance

The Nature Positive Universities Alliance was started by the UN Environment Programme (UNEP) and the University of Oxford as part of the UN Decade on Ecosystem Restoration. It aims to engage universities to prioritise nature restoration and sustainable development. The initiative launches with 117 universities from 48 countries, who have made individual pledges to assess their baseline, set smart targets, act and influence, and report annually. A further 408 universities worldwide have joined the Nature Positive University network to work towards making an official pledge, supported by a global student ambassador programme.
