1. About the research team and research project

This CUHK research project was initiated in 2019 by an interdisciplinary team from CUHK, the University of Hong Kong, the Hong Kong University of Science and Technology and the City University of Hong Kong, with funding support from the Research Grant Council's Research Impact Fund (R4046-18, <https://www.cuhk.edu.hk/proj/rif>). With a focus on extreme hot weather and elderly health as the climate changes, it has involved various studies and integrated analyses of thermal comfort, health impacts and mental health, in order to provide recommendations to improve the built environment and support services for elderly people. The project has now come to its final stage. The research team plans to publish its findings by summer 2023 so that the government, charitable organisations and the general public can better cope with the extreme heat in future.
