第一講 1st Lecture

中國思想史研究的比較方法: 余英時著作的反思 Comparative Approaches to the Study of Chinese Intellectual History: Reflections on the Work of Yu Ying-shih

Throughout his career, Yu Ying-shih worked to place the history of China within a larger word-historical framework. Although the field of global history has continued to develop since Yu Ying-shih's ground-breaking work, intellectual, cultural, and religious history have figured much less prominently in this scholarship than they did in Yu Ying-shih's arguments. The goal of this talk will be to ask what happens if we follow Yu Ying-shih's lead in taking intellectual, cultural, and religious history seriously when we explore world history.

第二講 2nd Lecture

文化與歷史:余英時、韋伯和比較史學方法 Culture and History: Yu Ying-shih, Weber, and Approaches to Comparative History

Yu Ying-shih's response to Weber's arguments concerning capitalism in China involved a significant attempt to re-think not only the Weberian framework but also basic assumptions in how to approach world history. My goal in this talk will be to discuss the larger implications of Yu Ying-shih's arguments about how we might approach the inter-relations of Chinese religious and economic history from a comparative perspective.
